How to Use This Companion Pack

This pack separates the reusable forms, worksheets, checklists, exercises, and control tools from the current source book so managers can print the operating pages without reprinting the full book. Read the source book for instruction, examples, context, and current use guidance.

Included resource groups

- Onboarding and role-specific training trackers
- Task-mastery sheets and SOP templates
- Training sign-offs, coaching, and retraining logs
- 30/60/90-day reviews and accountability tools

Control note

Use only the tools that solve a real operating need. Assign an owner, train the standard, preserve required records, and return to ThomasMonroeBooks.com for current approved releases. This pack does not replace legal, safety, employment, accounting, or regulatory guidance.

QUICK-START IMPLEMENTATION GUIDE

Use this guide to select the right workbook tool at the right moment. Do not try to complete the entire workbook at once. Begin with the employee, position, training stage, or performance issue that needs attention now.

START HERE BEFORE THE EMPLOYEE ARRIVES

□ Complete the New Hire Readiness Checklist.
□ Assign an approved trainer and confirm the training schedule.
□ Select the role-specific tracker for the employee's position.
□ Gather the correct SOPs, recipes, service standards, and safety procedures.

USE ON THE FIRST DAY

□ Complete the First Day Welcome Checklist and employee information pages.
□ Review appearance, attendance, conduct, safety, sanitation, and service culture.
□ Explain how the employee will be trained, observed, coached, and certified.

USE DURING THE FIRST WEEK

□ Follow the First Week Training Plan and the correct position tracker.
□ Record what was explained, demonstrated, practiced, and completed.
□ Use task-mastery sheets before approving independent work.
□ Set the next action and follow-up date after every training shift.

USE BEFORE CERTIFICATION

□ Observe the employee during real operating conditions.
□ Confirm accuracy, consistency, safety, pace, communication, and recovery skills.
□ Complete the station or position certification page only when the standard is truly met.

> Elite standard: A signature confirms verified readiness - not exposure, attendance, or time spent beside a trainer.

QUICK-START IMPLEMENTATION GUIDE: 90-DAY ROADMAP

BEFORE THE FIRST SHIFT

Prepare the employee file, identify required forms, assign the trainer, confirm the position standard, and schedule the first review points.

DAY 1

Welcome the employee, explain expectations, complete the restaurant tour, introduce safety and sanitation rules, and begin the role-specific tracker.

DAYS 2-7

Demonstrate tasks, provide supervised practice, document progress after each shift, identify gaps, and assign the next training priority.

DAY 7 CHECKPOINT

Review attendance, attitude, task progress, guest interaction, teamwork, safety, and readiness for additional responsibility. Do not allow unfinished training to become permanent habit.

30-DAY REVIEW

Confirm core task mastery, consistency, reliability, communication, and remaining training needs. Update the employee development plan.

60-DAY REVIEW

Evaluate performance during real volume, independence, judgment, teamwork, and response to coaching. Schedule retraining where needed.

90-DAY REVIEW

Make a documented decision: fully approved, approved with continued development, reassigned, retraining required, or not approved for the position.

WEEKLY MANAGER ROUTINE

□ Review every active trainee and every overdue follow-up.
□ Check for missing signatures, incomplete trackers, and unclear next steps.
□ Confirm trainers are teaching the approved standard consistently.
□ Assign one owner and one due date to every open training action.

MONTHLY SYSTEM ROUTINE

□ Review department training scores, repeated performance issues, certification gaps, and SOPs that need revision.
□ Select the three highest-risk training problems and create a documented correction plan.

The Cost of Poor Training

Poor training is expensive.
It does not always show up as one large cost. Instead, it shows up in small problems that repeat every day.
A server forgets to ring in an add-on.
A cook over-portions an expensive ingredient.
A bartender makes drinks inconsistently.
A host seats the dining room unevenly.
A dishwasher falls behind because the closing process was never clearly explained.
A prep cook makes too much product because par levels were not understood.
A manager spends the shift fixing problems that should have been prevented.
Each problem may seem small by itself.
Together, they cost the restaurant money.

Poor training can increase:

Labor cost
Food cost
Waste
Comps
Voids
Refunds
Turnover
Guest complaints
Manager stress
Employee frustration

Poor training also damages morale.
Good employees do not want to work in chaos. They do not want to constantly cover for people who were never trained properly.
They do not want standards to change depending on who is managing the shift.
When training is unclear, accountability feels unfair.
When training is clear, accountability becomes easier.

A manager can say:

“This is the standard.”
“This is where we trained it.”
“This is where you signed off.”
“This is what needs to improve.”
“This is when we will follow up.”

That kind of accountability is professional.
It is also fair.
The goal of training is not to punish employees.
The goal is to give employees the best possible chance to succeed while protecting the standards of the restaurant.

What Good Training Actually Looks Like

Good restaurant training is clear, organized, hands-on, and documented.
It does not depend on memory alone.
It does not depend on one strong trainer.
It does not change every time a different manager is working.

Good training follows a simple pattern:

Explain the standard.
Show the correct method.
Let the employee practice.
Observe the employee doing the task.
Correct mistakes immediately.
Have the employee repeat the task.
Confirm consistency.
Document completion.
Follow up later.

Training should always move from instruction to demonstration to practice to verification.
An employee should not be signed off just because they heard the explanation.
They should be signed off when they can perform the task correctly during real operating conditions.
For example, a server should not be considered trained only because they were told how to greet a table.
They should be observed greeting a real table.
A cook should not be considered trained only because they were shown a recipe.
They should be observed preparing the item correctly, using the correct portion, plate presentation, timing, and sanitation standards.
A dishwasher should not be considered trained only because they were told where clean dishes go.
They should be observed handling the dish flow during an actual shift, keeping up with volume, protecting sanitation standards, and completing closing duties correctly.
Training must be practical because restaurant work is practical.
The employee must know what to do when the restaurant is slow.
They must know what to do when the restaurant is busy.
They must know what to do when something goes wrong.
Good training prepares employees for real situations, not perfect situations.

The Manager’s Role in Training

The manager owns the training system.
A trainer may teach the employee.
An experienced employee may demonstrate the task.
A department lead may help with practice.
But the manager is responsible for making sure the training is clear, complete, documented, and followed up.
Managers should not assume training is complete just because an employee has worked several shifts.
Time worked is not the same as training completed.
An employee can work for weeks and still have serious training gaps if no one verifies task mastery.

The manager’s role is to ask:

Was the employee trained on the correct standard?
Who trained the employee?
Was the task demonstrated?
Did the employee practice?
Was performance observed?
Was the employee corrected?
Was the task signed off?
Does the employee still need follow-up?
Is the employee ready to work without constant supervision?
A manager must protect the standard.
That means training cannot be casual.
It must be intentional.
When managers take training seriously, employees usually take it more seriously too.
A strong manager does not just correct mistakes.
A strong manager builds a system that reduces repeat mistakes.

Training for Consistency, Not Just Completion

The goal of training is not to check boxes.
The goal is consistency.
A completed checklist does not matter if the employee still cannot perform the job correctly.
A signed training page does not matter if the manager never follows up.
A training system only works when it improves the way the restaurant operates.
Consistency means the guest experience does not depend on luck.
It means the guest receives the same standard whether they visit on Monday lunch or Saturday dinner.
It means the food is prepared correctly no matter which cook is working.
It means side work is completed no matter who closes.
It means employees understand expectations before they are held accountable.
Consistency does not happen by accident.
It is built through repeated standards, documented training, clear correction, and manager follow-up.
This workbook should help managers move from verbal training to visible training.
Verbal training is easy to forget.
Visible training can be reviewed, repeated, signed, corrected, and improved.
A restaurant with strong training has fewer surprises.
Employees know what is expected.
Managers know what was taught.
Trainers know what to cover.
Owners can see where the team is improving.
Guests feel the difference.
The purpose of this workbook is to help turn training into a system that lasts.

Service Culture Introduction

Employee Name: _____
Position: _____
Trainer Name: _____
Manager Name: _____

Every restaurant has a service culture.

Service culture means the way employees treat guests, support each other, solve problems, and protect the guest experience.

A new employee should understand the restaurant's service expectations early.

This is especially important in a full-service restaurant because the guest experience depends on teamwork between front of house, back of house, bar, support staff, and management.

Core Service Expectations

☐ Greet guests with professionalism.
☐ Make guests feel noticed.
☐ Listen carefully.
☐ Speak respectfully.
☐ Move with purpose.
☐ Keep work areas clean.
☐ Communicate with the team.
☐ Support coworkers during busy times.
☐ Take guest concerns seriously.
☐ Ask for help before a small problem becomes a bigger problem.
☐ Protect food quality.
☐ Protect ticket times.
☐ Protect the guest's trust.

Dishwasher Training Tracker

Employee Name: _____
Trainer Name: _____
Manager Name: _____
Training Start Date: _____
Training Completion Date: _____
Department: Back of House
Position: Dishwasher

Purpose:

This tracker helps managers train dishwashers on dish pit setup, dish machine use, sanitation, sorting, trash handling, kitchen support, closing duties, and shift flow.

The dishwasher affects the entire restaurant.

When the dish area falls behind, the kitchen slows down, servers run out of supplies, cooks lose equipment, and closing takes longer.

A strong dishwasher keeps the restaurant moving by staying organized, protecting sanitation standards, communicating with the team, and keeping clean dishes, glassware, silverware, pans, and smallwares available during service.

Prep Cook Training Tracker

Employee Name: _____
Trainer Name: _____
Manager Name: _____
Training Start Date: _____
Training Completion Date: _____
Department: Back of House
Position: Prep Cook

Purpose:

This tracker helps managers train prep cooks on prep lists, recipes, portioning, food safety, labeling, storage, par levels, waste control, communication, and station readiness.

Prep work affects the entire restaurant before the shift even begins.

When prep is accurate, the kitchen runs smoother, ticket times improve, food quality is more consistent, and waste is easier to control.

When prep is weak, the restaurant runs out of product, overproduces, wastes food, slows service, and frustrates cooks and managers.

A strong prep cook understands recipes, follows par levels, labels product correctly, communicates shortages, protects food safety, and prepares the restaurant for service.

Manager Training Tracker

Employee Name: _____
Trainer Name: _____
General Manager Name: _____
Training Start Date: _____
Training Completion Date: _____
Department: Management
Position: Manager / Shift Leader

Purpose:

This tracker helps restaurant leaders train managers and shift leaders on shift control, team leadership, guest recovery, labor awareness, cash handling, food safety, communication, opening duties, closing duties, and accountability.

A manager affects every part of the restaurant.

A strong manager protects standards, supports employees, solves problems, communicates clearly, controls the shift, follows up on issues, and makes decisions that protect the guest experience and the business.

Manager training should be taken seriously because managers create the tone of the restaurant.

Guest Recovery Mastery Sheet

Employee Name: _____
Position: _____
Trainer Name: _____
Manager Name: _____
Date: _____

Purpose:

Use this sheet to confirm that an employee understands how to respond when a guest is unhappy, confused, disappointed, or upset.

Guest recovery is one of the most important service skills in a full-service restaurant.

A mistake does not always lose a guest.

How the restaurant responds to the mistake often matters more than the mistake itself.

Employees should understand how to listen, respond professionally, avoid blame, notify a manager, and help protect the guest's trust.

Purpose:

Use this sheet to confirm that an employee understands the restaurant's cash handling, payment, checkout, and financial accountability standards.

Cash handling must be trained carefully because mistakes can affect guest trust, employee accountability, manager time, and restaurant financial control.

This sheet may be used for servers, bartenders, cashiers, hosts, managers, or any employee who handles payments.

Cash Handling Task Being Reviewed

Task Area:

Purpose:

Use this sheet to confirm that an employee can complete opening or closing tasks correctly, consistently, and without constant reminders.

Opening and closing duties protect the flow of the restaurant.

A strong opening shift helps the restaurant begin service prepared, stocked, clean, organized, and ready for guests.

A strong closing shift helps the restaurant end the day safely, cleanly, and ready for the next business day.

Opening and closing tasks should not be rushed, guessed, skipped, or left undocumented.

HOW TO BUILD A SIMPLE RESTAURANT SOP

Purpose:
Use this section to turn repeated restaurant tasks into clear written standards.
A strong SOP should answer:

1. What task is being performed?
2. Who is responsible?
3. When does it happen?
4. Why does it matter?
5. What tools, supplies, forms, or equipment are needed?
6. What steps must be followed?
7. What should the finished result look like?
8. What safety, sanitation, service, or cash control rules apply?
9. Who verifies completion?
10. What should the employee do if something goes wrong?

An SOP does not need to be complicated.
It needs to be clear.
Avoid vague instructions such as:

11. Clean the station properly.
12. Give good service.
13. Prep enough product.
14. Close the bar correctly.
15. Watch food quality.

Those phrases sound helpful, but they do not tell the employee exactly what to do.
A better SOP uses observable standards:

16. Wipe and sanitize all food-contact surfaces.
17. Restock lemons, straws, napkins, beverage napkins, and receipt paper before service.
18. Label and date all prepared product before placing it in the walk-in.
19. Check every plate for correct item, correct side, correct garnish, and clean rim before it leaves the kitchen.
20. Count the drawer according to restaurant policy before closing the shift.

If an employee cannot look at the SOP and understand the expected action, the SOP needs to be clearer.

SOP BUILDING CHECKLIST

☐ Choose one repeated task.
☐ Write the exact task name.
☐ Identify the position responsible.

☐ Identify when the task should be completed.
☐ Watch the task being done correctly.
☐ List the steps in the correct order.
☐ Add required tools, supplies, equipment, or forms.
☐ Add safety or sanitation requirements.
☐ Add guest service expectations if applicable.
☐ Add food quality or portion standards if applicable.
☐ Add cash control or manager approval rules if applicable.
☐ Define what the finished result should look like.
☐ Identify who verifies completion.
☐ Test the SOP with an employee.
☐ Revise any unclear steps.
☐ Train the team on the SOP.
☐ Set a review date.

COMMON SOP MISTAKES

☐ SOP is too long.
☐ SOP is too vague.
☐ SOP is written by someone who does not perform the task.
☐ SOP does not include tools or supplies needed.
☐ SOP does not explain the finished standard.
☐ SOP does not include safety or sanitation.
☐ SOP is written but never trained.
☐ SOP is trained once but never followed up.
☐ SOP is not updated when the process changes.
☐ No manager is responsible for verifying the standard.

SOP TITLE

Opening the Server Beverage and Service Station
SOP Number: FOH-OPEN-004 Department: Front of House Version: 1.0
Effective Date: March 1, 2026 Owner: FOH Manager Review Frequency: Quarterly

PURPOSE

To ensure the server beverage and service station is clean, stocked, safe, and fully ready before guests are seated.

WHO PERFORMS THIS SOP

The assigned opening server completes the procedure. The opening manager verifies completion before opening the dining room.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT

☐ Sanitizer bucket and test strips ☐ Clean wiping towels ☐ Cups and lids
☐ Straws and napkins ☐ Beverage syrups ☐ Tea and coffee supplies
☐ Ice scoop and holder ☐ Backup glassware ☐ Approved opening checklist

PROCEDURE

1. Wash hands and inspect the station for spills, food debris, pests, broken equipment, or safety hazards.
2. Prepare sanitizer at the restaurant’s approved concentration. Verify the solution with a test strip and record the result.
3. Wipe and sanitize all counters, handles, dispensers, nozzles, trays, and frequently touched surfaces.
4. Inspect beverage nozzles and tea/coffee equipment. Reclean any item that is sticky, stained, or not ready for use.
5. Stock each item to the approved opening par. Rotate dated products using first-in, first-out procedures.
6. Fill the ice bin using the approved scoop. Never use a glass or allow the scoop handle to contact the ice.
7. Brew tea and coffee according to approved recipes and record required times or discard times.
8. Test beverage equipment and report leaks, incorrect carbonation, temperature problems, or empty products immediately.
9. Remove empty boxes, personal items, and unapproved supplies from the station.
10. Complete the opening checklist and request manager verification before the first guest is seated.

COMPLETED EXAMPLE: RESTAURANT SOP - VERIFICATION

STANDARD OF COMPLETION

The station is approved only when surfaces are clean and dry, sanitizer is verified, equipment operates correctly, all required items meet par, products are rotated and dated, no safety hazard is present, and the manager has signed the opening checklist.

COMMON ERRORS TO PREVENT

☐ Stocking over dirty surfaces.
☐ Preparing sanitizer without testing the concentration.
☐ Using an unclean ice scoop or leaving the scoop inside the ice.
☐ Mixing old and new dated products without proper rotation.
☐ Marking the checklist complete before the work is actually finished.

CORRECTIVE ACTION

If any standard is missed, the employee corrects the issue before opening the station. Repeated misses require coaching, retraining, and manager follow-up documentation.

MANAGER VERIFICATION CHECK

☒ Sanitizer tested and acceptable.
☒ Station surfaces and equipment clean.
☒ Opening pars met and products rotated.
☒ Tea, coffee, beverage, and ice procedures completed.
☒ No unresolved safety or equipment concern.
Example Completion Record: Completed by Jordan Lee at 10:12 a.m. Verified by Casey Reed at 10:18 a.m. No correction required.

SOP REVISION RECORD

Revision Date: June 1, 2026
Change Made: Added required beverage-equipment test and manager escalation for leaks or carbonation problems.
Reason: Two opening shifts began with an empty product line that had not been identified before service.
Approved By: General Manager - Casey Reed

> What makes this example strong: The employee knows who performs the task, the exact sequence, the completion standard, the common errors, the verification method, and what happens when the standard is missed.

Purpose:
Use this template to document safety procedures that protect employees, guests, food, equipment, and the restaurant.
Safety procedures should be written clearly because employees need to know what to do before something goes wrong.
A strong safety SOP explains the risk, the correct steps, who must be notified, what should never be done, and how the situation should be documented.

SOP REVIEW AND UPDATE LOG

Purpose:
Use this log to track when SOPs are reviewed, updated, corrected, or retrained.
Restaurant procedures change over time.
Menus change.
Equipment changes.
Staffing changes.
Service expectations change.
Health department expectations may change.
Managers may discover that an SOP is unclear, incomplete, outdated, or not being followed correctly.
An SOP that is not reviewed can become useless.
This log helps managers keep SOPs current and helps the restaurant document when standards were updated.

SOP REVIEW RULES

☐ Review important SOPs at least once per year.
☐ Review food safety SOPs whenever procedures or equipment change.
☐ Review service SOPs when guest complaints reveal a repeated issue.
☐ Review cleaning SOPs when inspections, walkthroughs, or manager checks reveal missed standards.
☐ Review opening and closing SOPs when shifts are not being completed consistently.
☐ Review cash handling SOPs when voids, comps, refunds, drawer issues, or payment mistakes occur.
☐ Review training SOPs when employees keep asking the same questions or making the same mistakes.
☐ Update an SOP immediately if the current process is unsafe, unclear, or incorrect.

WHEN TO UPDATE AN SOP

☐ The process changed.
☐ The equipment changed.
☐ The menu changed.
☐ The layout changed.
☐ The law, rule, or policy changed.
☐ Employees are confused by the current SOP.
☐ The SOP is too vague.
☐ The SOP is too long.
☐ The SOP does not match the real task.
☐ Managers are correcting the same issue repeatedly.
☐ Guests are affected by the current process.
☐ Food quality is affected by the current process.
☐ Safety or sanitation is affected by the current process.

PART 6
TRAINING SIGN-OFF PAGES

Purpose of This Section:
Training should not end with a verbal “they’re good.”
A restaurant needs a clear way to confirm that an employee was trained, practiced the task, demonstrated the correct standard, and was approved by a trainer or manager.
Sign-off pages protect the employee, the trainer, the manager, and the restaurant.
They create proof that training happened.
They also help managers see where training is incomplete.
A signed page should never mean, “We showed this once.”
A signed page should mean, “This employee has been trained, observed, corrected if needed, and approved to perform this task or position according to the restaurant standard.”

This section includes pages for:

1. Trainer sign-off standards
2. Employee training sign-off
3. Station certification
4. Position certification
5. Retraining sign-off
6. Final training approval

Managers should use these pages carefully.
Do not sign off on training that has not truly been completed.
Do not allow trainers to sign off just to move faster.
Do not certify employees who still need major correction.
A strong sign-off system helps the restaurant avoid confusion later.
If performance slips, the manager can review what was trained, when it was trained, who approved it, and what follow-up is needed.

TRAINING SIGN-OFF RULES

□ Training must be explained clearly.
□ The employee must have a chance to practice.
□ The trainer must observe the employee performing the task.
□ Mistakes must be corrected before sign-off.
□ The employee must understand the expected standard.
□ The employee must be able to perform the task during real shift conditions when applicable.
□ The trainer must not sign off unless the employee is ready.
□ The manager should review important sign-offs.
□ Follow-up should be scheduled when the employee needs more practice.
□ Retraining should be documented when standards are missed after sign-off.

WHEN NOT TO SIGN OFF

Do not sign off if:

□ The employee only watched someone else do the task.
□ The employee still needs constant reminders.
□ The employee cannot explain the standard.
□ The employee performs the task correctly only when the restaurant is slow.
□ The employee skips safety or sanitation steps.
□ The employee does not understand when to ask for help.
□ The trainer is unsure whether the employee is ready.
□ The manager has not reviewed a critical task when manager approval is required.

_____

Position / Department:

_____

Manager Name:

_____

Date Reviewed:

_____

Purpose:
Use this page to confirm that trainers understand what it means to sign off on employee training.
A trainer's signature matters.
When a trainer signs off, they are saying the employee has been taught the correct standard, has practiced the task, and has demonstrated the task well enough to move forward.
Trainer sign-off should never be casual.
A trainer should not sign off because they like the employee, trust the employee, want to finish training faster, or feel pressured to move on.
The trainer should sign only when the employee is actually ready.

TRAINER RESPONSIBILITIES

☐ Teach the correct standard.
☐ Demonstrate the task clearly.
☐ Explain why the task matters.
☐ Allow the employee to practice.
☐ Observe the employee performing the task.
☐ Correct mistakes immediately.
☐ Have the employee repeat the task when needed.
☐ Confirm the employee understands the standard.
☐ Document what was completed.
☐ Communicate training concerns to the manager.
☐ Refuse to sign off if the employee is not ready.

WHAT THE TRAINER MUST VERIFY

Before signing off, the trainer must verify that the employee can:

☐ Perform the task correctly.
☐ Follow safety rules.
☐ Follow sanitation rules.
☐ Follow service standards if applicable.
☐ Use required tools, supplies, or equipment.
☐ Complete the task in the correct order.
☐ Recognize when something is wrong.
☐ Ask for help when needed.
☐ Complete the task without constant reminders.
☐ Repeat the task consistently.

TRAINER READINESS REQUIREMENTS

□ Consistently performs the position according to approved SOPs and standards.
□ Can explain not only what to do, but why the standard matters.
□ Demonstrates tasks in a clear, organized sequence.
□ Uses the correct recipes, portions, service steps, safety rules, and equipment procedures.
□ Gives the trainee supervised practice instead of only demonstrating the task.
□ Observes performance closely and corrects errors immediately and respectfully.
□ Does not embarrass, insult, rush, threaten, or intentionally confuse the trainee.
□ Documents what was taught, what was practiced, and what still needs follow-up.
□ Signs off only after independent, consistent performance has been observed.
□ Escalates safety, harassment, discrimination, injury, allergy, cash, or serious conduct concerns to management immediately.

Purpose:
Use this page when an employee needs retraining after a standard has been missed, forgotten, changed, or performed incorrectly.
Retraining should not automatically feel like punishment.
In many cases, retraining is the correct professional response when an employee needs the standard explained again, practiced again, or verified again.
Retraining protects consistency.
It also gives the employee a fair chance to correct the issue before stronger accountability is needed.
REASON FOR RETRAINING
Retraining is needed because:
☐ Standard was missed.
☐ Task was performed incorrectly.
☐ Employee forgot the correct process.
☐ SOP changed.
☐ Position responsibility changed.
☐ Safety issue occurred.
☐ Sanitation issue occurred.
☐ Guest complaint occurred.
☐ Food quality issue occurred.

PART 7
COACHING AND RETRAINING LOGS

Purpose of This Section:
Even good employees need coaching.
A restaurant should not wait until a problem becomes serious before addressing it.
Coaching gives managers a way to correct small issues early, explain expectations clearly, and help employees improve before stronger action is needed.
Retraining gives employees a chance to relearn the correct standard when something was missed, forgotten, changed, or misunderstood.
This section helps managers document coaching conversations, performance corrections, retraining assignments, follow-up reviews, repeated issues, and manager action plans.
The goal is not to create paperwork for no reason.
The goal is to create fair, clear, useful documentation.
Good documentation helps answer important questions:

1. What happened?
2. What standard was missed?
3. Was the employee coached?
4. Was retraining assigned?
5. Did the manager follow up?
6. Did the issue improve?
7. Is the issue repeating?
8. What is the next action?

Coaching should be professional, specific, and connected to a clear standard.
A manager should avoid vague statements like:
“You need to do better.”
“You have to care more.”
“You’re not paying attention.”
Those statements may express frustration, but they do not clearly explain what must change.
A stronger coaching conversation sounds like:
“Tonight, the closing side work was not completed before clock-out. The server station was missing rolled silverware, the tea urns were not cleaned, and the trash was not pulled. The closing checklist requires those items before checkout. Tomorrow, I need you to follow the checklist and have a manager verify it before leaving.”
That kind of coaching is specific.
It names the issue.
It connects the issue to a standard.
It explains the expected correction.
It gives the employee a fair chance to improve.
WHEN COACHING IS NEEDED
Coaching may be needed when:
□ A standard is missed.
□ A task is incomplete.
□ An employee needs repeated reminders.
□ Service quality slips.
□ Food quality slips.
□ Cleaning is missed.
□ Side work is incomplete.
□ Opening or closing duties are missed.
□ Communication breaks down.
□ Guest complaints increase.
□ Safety or sanitation expectations are not followed.
□ The employee seems unsure of the correct process.
□ A small issue may become a bigger issue if ignored.
COACHING RULES FOR MANAGERS
□ Coach privately when possible.
□ Stay calm and professional.
□ Focus on the behavior or standard, not the person.
□ Explain what happened.

□ Explain what standard was missed.
□ Ask whether the employee understands.
□ Give the employee a chance to respond.
□ Explain the correction needed.
□ Set a follow-up expectation.
□ Document the conversation when needed.
□ Follow up when promised.

COMPLETED EXAMPLE: COACHING AND RETRAINING FORM

The restaurant and employee names in this completed example are fictional. The example demonstrates objective documentation, a clear standard, a specific retraining plan, and a verified follow-up decision.

EMPLOYEE AND INCIDENT INFORMATION

Employee: Jordan Lee Position: Server Manager: Casey Reed

Date of Coaching: April 12, 2026 Shift: Sunday Dinner

Issue Category: Order accuracy and allergy communication

OBJECTIVE DESCRIPTION OF WHAT OCCURRED

At 6:42 p.m., Table 34 requested that cheese be removed because of a dairy allergy. The order was entered with “no cheese,” but the allergy modifier was not selected and the manager and kitchen were not verbally notified. The plate reached the expo window with cheese and was stopped before delivery.

STANDARD THAT APPLIES

Allergy requests require the correct POS allergy modifier, verbal notification to the manager, direct confirmation with the kitchen or expo according to restaurant procedure, and a final verification before delivery.

EMPLOYEE EXPLANATION

Jordan stated that the guest first said “no cheese” and only used the word “allergy” after the order had been entered. Jordan updated the item note but forgot to change the modifier and notify the manager.

IMMEDIATE COACHING PROVIDED

The manager reviewed the allergy procedure, explained why an item note alone is not enough, demonstrated the correct POS steps, and required Jordan to repeat the verbal escalation process.

RETRAINING ASSIGNMENT

1. Review SOP FOH-SAFE-003 before the next shift.
2. Complete three simulated allergy orders with the manager.
3. Correctly process the next two real allergy requests under direct observation.
4. Receive manager verification before independent allergy-order handling resumes.

FOLLOW-UP OBSERVATION

Follow-Up Date: April 15, 2026 Observer: Casey Reed

Simulation 1: Correct modifier, manager notification, and kitchen confirmation completed.

Simulation 2: Employee initially forgot final expo verification; task repeated correctly.

Simulation 3: Entire procedure completed correctly without prompting.

Real Order 1: Procedure completed correctly at Table 18.

Real Order 2: Procedure completed correctly at Table 42 during peak volume.

EMPLOYEE UNDERSTANDING

Jordan explained: “When a guest identifies an allergy, I must use the allergy modifier, tell the manager, confirm directly with the kitchen or expo, and verify the plate before delivery. A note by itself is not enough.”

FOLLOW-UP DECISION

☒ Standard met after retraining. Employee may resume independent handling with normal manager oversight.
□ Additional retraining required.
□ Written performance action required.
□ Position reassignment recommended.

CONTINUED EXPECTATION

Any future missed allergy escalation will require immediate removal from allergy-order handling, documented performance correction, and management review before approval is restored.

Employee Comments: I understand the standard and why every step is required.

> What makes this example strong: It separates facts from assumptions, identifies the exact standard, records the employee’s explanation, assigns measurable retraining, verifies real performance, and documents the final decision.

Manager Name:

_____

Trainer Assigned:

_____

Date Assigned:

_____

Purpose:
Use this log when an employee needs additional training on a task, station, procedure, or standard.
Retraining should be assigned when the employee does not yet meet the standard, when a process changes, or when the manager needs to verify that the employee can perform the task correctly.
Retraining should be specific.
Do not write “needs to do better.”
Write the exact standard that needs to be reviewed, practiced, and verified.
RETRAINING REASON
Retraining is being assigned because:
☐ Task was missed
☐ Task was performed incorrectly
☐ Employee needs repeated reminders
☐ SOP changed
☐ Checklist was not followed
☐ Safety issue occurred
☐ Sanitation issue occurred
☐ Guest complaint occurred
☐ Food quality issue occurred
☐ Cash handling issue occurred

Manager Name:

_____

Tracking Start Date:

_____

Purpose:
Use this tracker when the same issue keeps happening after coaching, correction, or retraining.
A repeated issue may mean the employee needs more training, clearer expectations, stronger accountability, a position review, or a manager follow-up plan.
Repeated issues should not be ignored.
When the same problem happens again and again, managers need documentation that shows what happened, what action was taken, and whether the employee improved.
This tracker helps managers see patterns instead of treating every incident like a separate surprise.

30/60/90 DAY REVIEW RULES

☐ Be honest.
☐ Be specific.
☐ Use examples.
☐ Connect feedback to restaurant standards.
☐ Allow the employee to respond.
☐ Document strengths.
☐ Document improvement areas.
☐ Assign follow-up actions.
☐ Set a next review date.
☐ Do not wait until the review to address serious issues.
☐ Use the review to support growth, not replace daily coaching.

30-Day Review Date:

_____

Purpose:
Use this review to check the employee's early progress after the first month.
At 30 days, the employee should understand basic expectations, position standards, schedule expectations, communication rules, and the training path.
The employee may not be fully independent yet, but there should be clear progress.

30-DAY REVIEW FOCUS

At this stage, the manager should review:

☐ Attendance and punctuality
☐ Uniform and appearance
☐ Professional behavior
☐ Basic position understanding
☐ Training progress
☐ Safety and sanitation awareness
☐ Communication with managers
☐ Communication with coworkers
☐ Guest service if applicable
☐ Food quality if applicable
☐ Willingness to learn

At 60 days, the employee should show stronger position understanding, more consistency, better independence, and clearer response to coaching.
The manager should look for patterns.
Has the employee improved since the 30-day review?
Are the same issues repeating?
Is the employee becoming more dependable?
Does the employee understand the restaurant's standards?

60-DAY REVIEW FOCUS

At this stage, the manager should review:

90-Day Review Date:

_____

Purpose:
Use this review to evaluate the employee's performance after the first 90 days.
At 90 days, the manager should have a clear understanding of whether the employee is meeting the restaurant's standards, still needs development, or may be ready for more responsibility.

This review should look at the full picture:

1. Training completion
2. Position performance
3. Consistency
4. Reliability
5. Teamwork
6. Guest service or food quality
7. Safety and sanitation
8. Response to coaching
9. Long-term fit

A 90-day review should be honest.
If the employee is doing well, document the strengths and set the next growth goal.
If the employee is still struggling, identify the exact issue and decide whether more training, retraining, coaching, position review, or stronger accountability is needed.

90-DAY REVIEW FOCUS

At this stage, the manager should review:

☐ Overall position performance
☐ Training completion
☐ Task mastery
☐ Station readiness
☐ Reliability

Purpose:
Use this page to identify what the employee does well and where the employee has room to grow.
A strong review should not only point out problems.
It should also recognize progress, effort, strengths, and potential.
Employees are more likely to improve when they understand both sides:

1. What they should keep doing
2. What they need to work on next

This page can be used during a 30-day, 60-day, 90-day, or ongoing performance review.

Purpose:
Use this page after an employee review to make sure the manager follows through on the next steps.
A review is only useful if it leads to action.
If the manager identifies a training gap, repeated issue, strength, opportunity, or growth goal, there should be a clear follow-up plan.
This page helps prevent reviews from becoming paperwork with no follow-through.

Purpose:
Use this page when an employee has completed the early review period but still needs a clear growth plan.
A continued development plan can be used for employees who are doing well and ready to grow, or employees who need more structure before they can fully meet expectations.
Development should not stop after the first 90 days.
Strong restaurants keep building employees after basic training is complete.
This page helps managers identify the next skills, responsibilities, habits, and standards the employee should work on.

Purpose:
Use this page to review how employee progress is being evaluated during the first 30, 60, and 90 days.
The goal is to make sure new employees are not simply placed on the schedule and forgotten.
A strong review system gives managers a way to check training progress, recognize strengths, correct issues early, and decide what support the employee needs next.

PART 9
MANAGER TRAINING ACCOUNTABILITY

Purpose of This Section:
Training only works when managers follow up.
A restaurant can have great checklists, strong SOPs, detailed trackers, and clear sign-off pages, but if managers do not review them consistently, the system will slowly fall apart.
Training accountability means managers are not just asking, “Did we train them?”
Managers are asking:

1. Was the training completed correctly?
2. Was the employee observed?
3. Was the standard documented?
4. Was follow-up completed?
5. Are the same mistakes repeating?
6. Are trainers signing off honestly?
7. Are managers reviewing training gaps?
8. Is the team getting stronger over time?

A strong training system needs manager ownership.
Managers should not wait until problems show up during service, guest complaints, food mistakes, missed cleaning, poor closing, or turnover.
They should review training before those problems grow.
This section gives managers weekly, monthly, department-level, and team-level review tools.
These pages help managers see where training is working and where the restaurant still has gaps.
MANAGER TRAINING ACCOUNTABILITY RULES
□ Review training every week.
□ Do not assume training is complete without checking documentation.
□ Follow up on incomplete sign-offs.
□ Review repeated mistakes for possible training gaps.
□ Hold trainers accountable for accurate sign-offs.
□ Make sure SOPs are being used, not just stored.
□ Compare employee performance to written standards.
□ Use coaching and retraining logs when needed.
□ Track department training gaps.
□ Review training progress before scheduling employees independently.
□ Make training part of management routine.

Purpose:
Use this page once per month to review the restaurant's overall training system.
The weekly training review catches short-term issues.
The monthly training review helps managers see bigger patterns.

A monthly review should answer:

1. Are new employees being trained on time?
2. Are employees being certified correctly?
3. Are managers following up?
4. Are trainers doing their job?
5. Are SOPs being used?
6. Are repeated mistakes connected to training gaps?
7. Which department needs the most attention?

TRAINING GAPS REVIEW

Date:

_____

Manager Name:

_____

Restaurant / Location:

_____

Purpose:
Use this page to identify where training is weak, missing, unclear, outdated, or not being followed.
A training gap is the space between what the restaurant expects and what employees are actually able to do consistently.
Training gaps often show up as repeated mistakes.
Managers should not assume every mistake is an attitude problem.
Sometimes employees fail because the standard was never explained clearly, never demonstrated, never practiced, never documented, or never followed up on.
This review helps managers find the real cause.

_____

Purpose:
Use this page to review whether the team is ready to handle normal restaurant conditions.
A team can be scheduled and still not be ready.
Readiness means the right people are trained, the right stations are covered, the standards are understood, and managers know where support is needed.
This page can be used before a busy weekend, holiday, private event, seasonal rush, staffing change, menu rollout, or after several new hires have been added.

Purpose:

Use this checklist to hold managers accountable for keeping the training system active.
A training system only works when managers use it consistently.
If managers stop checking training, employees stop seeing it as important.
If managers stop reviewing sign-offs, trainers may rush.
If managers stop following up, repeated problems become normal.
This checklist helps managers confirm that training is being reviewed, documented, corrected, and improved.

MANAGER TRAINING RESPONSIBILITIES

☐ Review new hire training progress.
☐ Review employees currently in training.
☐ Check incomplete training trackers.
☐ Check missing sign-off pages.
☐ Confirm trainers are using the correct standards.
☐ Confirm employees are not being certified too early.
☐ Review coaching logs when standards are missed.
☐ Review retraining logs when employees need additional support.
☐ Review repeated issues for training gaps.
☐ Review SOPs that may be missing, unclear, or outdated.
☐ Schedule follow-up for employees needing more training.
☐ Communicate training priorities to other managers.
☐ Make sure training is part of the weekly management routine.

PART 10
FINAL REVIEW AND NOTES

Purpose of This Section:
A training workbook should not end with a stack of completed forms.
It should end with a clear review of what the restaurant has learned.
The purpose of this final section is to help managers look at the full training system and decide what needs to be improved next.
By the time a manager reaches this section, they should have tools for:

1. New hire onboarding
2. Position training
3. Task mastery
4. SOP building
5. Training sign-offs
6. Coaching
7. Retraining
8. Employee reviews
9. Manager accountability

The final question is:
Is the restaurant actually stronger because of the system?
A strong training system should make the restaurant easier to manage.
It should reduce repeated questions.
It should reduce avoidable mistakes.
It should make expectations clearer.
It should help employees know what “good” looks like.
It should help managers coach more fairly.
It should help trainers teach the same standard.
It should help the restaurant protect service, food quality, safety, sanitation, and consistency.
This section gives managers space to review employee development, review the workbook, improve the training system, and keep notes for future updates.

FINAL REVIEW RULES

☐ Be honest about what worked.
☐ Be honest about what did not work.
☐ Review the forms that were actually used.
☐ Identify the forms that were skipped.
☐ Look for repeated training gaps.
☐ Look for weak follow-up.
☐ Look for unclear SOPs.
☐ Look for missing manager accountability.
☐ Choose the next improvement step.
☐ Do not let the workbook sit unused after completion.

Purpose:

Use this page to turn the final workbook review into a clear improvement plan.
A restaurant training system should keep getting better.
The first version does not have to be perfect.
What matters is that managers keep improving the system based on what is actually happening in the restaurant.
If employees keep making the same mistake, the training system may need to be clearer.
If managers keep skipping a form, the system may need better accountability.
If trainers teach different standards, the SOPs may need to be reviewed.
If new employees are confused, onboarding may need to be stronger.
This page helps managers choose the next steps instead of letting the same problems continue.
